'55'

The Editor's Comments

Once again our school year is drawing to a close and the Acatec office is closed down for the summer. It has been a good year for most of us, and the '55 Acatec will serve as a reminder of this in the years to come.

I would like to thank a great many persons who have made this book possible: Mr. Pogue and Miss Godwin; Mr. Asquin and his art class which this year took much of the burden of the layout work; Mr. Irwin's art class, and particularly Bill Irish who designed the cover and the dividers; the many teachers and students who have given me advice along the way; Mr. Blaine for his photography; the Commonwealth Press; the janitors who never failed to keep our office in tip top shape. Without the combined effort of all these people my task would have been impossible.

Working on the book, has been a great experience and I think we have all gained something from it. In closing I'll use the old stand-by "Here is your book, I hope you enjoy it."

Up and Doing

"All that is necessary for the triumph of evil is that good men do nothing," wrote Edmund Burke in England towards the end of the 18th century. Mid-twentieth century events in this province are calling upon good men, both youth and adult, to do something.

Each of you at Western, every Tom, Dick and Harry of you will be needed during this century—all the Marilyn's, Shirley's, Donna's and Pat's. Right now you are needed in an all-out joint effort of students, staff and administration to equip yourselves to do your best work in the fields of your choice, ranging from advanced mathematics, office practice, motor mechanics, and the professions, to the fine arts: music, theatre, painting, literature. Nothing less than your best is honest. Nothing less is ever satisfying.

Your special talents, and each of you has at least one, are urgently needed. Talents not half-developed, but carefully cultivated over many years of patient labor in the classroom, shop, or studio. They are needed in other regions of Canada; in the wider family of the Commonwealth of Nations and in the world-embracing activities of the United Nations and its various agencies.

The sterling qualities of your character are needed. Above all, perhaps, it is your honesty which the school and outside world so greatly need. It is honesty, of sturdy home-spun quality, which prompts students to report without fail to an instructor if assigned work is not prepared so that no one need be held back. This single act of honesty, of courtesy, not to mention others, will do miracles in welding students, staff and administration into a working unit, a oneness of purpose from which springs spontaneously real "school spirit."

Acid test, perhaps, of the temper, the quality of a school is the readiness of our laughter. This is especially true of those courses where the going becomes hard, at times too hard, a bit grim in spots. To be able to laugh together is a proof of progress. It is one of the rewards of those who have first learned to work well together. Such laughter is irresistible, lifting the gloomiest pupil, the most unreasonable of instructors to a better frame of mind. From a class-room, where it happens all too seldom, goes out to the student body of Western a simple message pronounced in our very best French accent: Du courage! En avant! et puis, de bonnes vacances!

As President of the Students' Union, I would like to express my appreciation for the assistance and the friendly advice given me by the Principal and staff, the Students' Council, and the entire student body.

Here at Western through our common interest in studies, clubs, athletics and social activities, we have helped form part of the foundation needed in later life.

Tennyson once wrote—

Build Today, Then, Strong And Sure,
With a firm and ample base;
And ascending and secure
Shall tomorrow find its place.

So may we progress and make good in the greater life now opening to us.

To those who remain we say "Thank You" and "Carry On."

The past year at Western has, of course, been wonderful; it has been packed full of innumerable exciting activities.

"Gridiron Frolics," the first dance of the season, honored Western's freshmen. It was followed by the rugby dances which had good attendance.

A trip to Lethbridge, after the end of the high school football season, was enjoyed by all who went: the senior rugby players, the cheerleaders, and the spectators. Western was victorious over L.C.I.

Next came the basketball season which, although Western did not get into the finals, proved very exciting. Dances after the game provided a full evening's entertainment.

New things Western received during the last term were basketball outfits for the boys and cowboy outfits for the majorettes. Also, thirty new records were added to Western's already varied collection.

The new school constitution, which the Union has been working on since last fall, is practically finished. This constitution will fill a needed place in the Students' Union.

March—and Mr. Lawrence Parker, ex-Western teacher, was guest speaker at our Annual Athletic Banquet. Gifts were presented to the various team coaches, displays were exhibited by the teams, and a sing-song was led by Mr. Hodgert. The food was terrific, and the evening turned out to be one to be long remembered by everyone present.

"Operation Western" was the big event of the year. During the week previous to it, seven candidates campaigned for the honor of being Miss Western. After the posters were all mounted, the speeches given, and the votes cast, pretty _____ was chosen to reign as Queen.

Then came the very wonderful graduation banquet, ball, and finally the graduation exercises. Such nights! And such a terrific time was had by all! Awards Day added the finishing touch to a year at Western which will long be remembered by all of us.

Olive Sultan,
Secretary of Students' Union.

LITERARY

'Haven from War'

Life in England during the war was bleak, many families were separated and ours was no exception. Father, was overseas and mother thought London was too precarious a spot for me. Therefore, at the age of nine years, I found myself at "Cromwell House," a boarding school on the coast, for boys under eight and girls under fifteen. The time I remained there was quite unforgettable as I think of it now. Memories come crowding back to me of cod-liver oil, midnight feasts, and ballet lessons.

The mornings always began with assembly and ended with "sums." Adding and subtracting were torture as far as I was concerned, and so I never liked the mornings. Afternoons consisted of "games" (swimming, which I liked moderately, hockey, which I detested, or gymnastics, which I couldn't do). The only thing I enjoyed was my ballet lessons, which I accepted readily as part of my curriculum. On special occasions I would be summoned to the drawing-rooms of the head mistress and requested to play the piano. In all the years I was there, I never did discover whether this was meant as an honor for good conduct or a punishment for bad behaviour.

Supper, held at six o'clock, was a formal affair. There were five or more long tables in the dining-room, each headed by a tall, angular teacher and flanked by pupils of every shape and size. The food was plain. I shall always remember a dessert delicately referred to as "junktet," that seemed to be a cross between jelly and salty blanc-mange.

Boarding-school offered little in the way of amusement, so, in the evenings the students would present amateur nights and pantomimes using old costumes and the rocking-horse in the nursery.

There were many children and consequently, many birthdays. Even in wartime the cook managed to bake small cakes and sweets, and the teachers saw that every child had a birthday party, candles and all.

The "tuck-box" was opened every night after supper. It was a large black box filled with as many candies and chocolate bars as rations would allow. In addition, many children received delicacies from other parts of the world, such as Canada and the United States, and all these goodies were placed in the "tuck-box" also.

Running a school, even in peace time, is a bit of a chore; but during the war it was harder. Yet, without the luxuries of pre-war schools "Cromwell House" managed, with strictness and discipline, to train many children, to feed them well and to thus protect them from the insecurity of war.

Vigil

Crouched low upon the hill
As though carved of stone
Braced against the evening chill,
Tense of mind, and bone,
Lean this youth of brawn
Adorned by one lone feather,
As proud as a swan
In the soft Spring weather.

Ever on guard, now he
With ear against the soil,
Hears the hooves of destiny
Within the earth's ponderous turmoil.
Then echoing thrill upon thrill,
Warning tones slow and sad,
Warbling like a lonely whip-poor-will
The wary little Indian lad
Decries the Interlopers.

Victoria Crowchild

God's Masterpiece

"I shall make a masterpiece," said God one day
"For countless animals to romp and play."
He chiselled out mountains, and plains he rolled.
He planted bushes, and carved rivers untold.

He molded lakes, and spread the good soil,
The farmer's life, sweat and toil.

He molded lakes, and spread the good soil,
The farmer's life, sweat and toil.
Beauty, richness, vastness, all abound—
Alberta, God's masterpiece, distinctive, renown.

Marg Sissons

Farewell Western!

When first we came into these halls
So huge and oh so scary,
We thought we'd never stick it out,
Of all things we were wary.
So many kids were all around,
A sea of funny faces.
For classes we were everywhere,
Could we ever find our places?
The teachers were so very stern,
The principal—he glared,
There were so many of them about
Jeepers—we were scared!
But gradually the halls grew smaller,
They assumed a festive air,
As signs and posters graced the walls
To tell of each school affair.
In the classroom we had fun,
Many jokes do we recall,
And we learned that even teachers
Are human after all.
So thank you teachers one and all,
For help in a thousand ways
In studies, sports in being our friends
We'll remember all our days.

My Eighteenth Birthday

I sit before the fire and dream,
This is my birthday, I'm eighteen,
I think of the years that lie ahead—
Of the wonders God has before me spread.
No clouds in my sky, the stars shine clear,
As I stand on the threshold of my nineteenth year.

Joan David

These Prairies

These flat, monotonous plains have been longed for with remorse,
By lonely travelling cowboys who miss the spur and horse,
But these treeless, tracts of land get no love from me,
For I long for the rugged mountains of my home in Trail, B.C.

Pat Reed

“The Gopher”

Over the prairie, and the newly turned sod,
I spotted a gopher on an old log.
His fur was all sweaty,
His face in distress,
His leg it was broken,
A sad looking mess.

I picked him up and carried him home,
To see what could be done
With the broken bone.
He cried and he squealed,
Because of the pain
He did not know
It was all in vain.

But now it's all healed,
Again good and strong,
Good enough to carry him
Once the world around,
I guess it was just the will of God,
So that he could return,
To his home in the sod.

Golden Jubilee

Sunny Alberta, to thee I am coming,
News of your Golden Jubilee is a-humming,
With welcoming arms you beckon me home,
Oh, now, I shall never evermore roam.

Your skies are the bluest,
Your people are the truest,
Your babbling brooks so clear,
And all of your customs so dear.

Edmonton, capital of the old west,
In hockey and football proved the best,
But that world famous city where my feet do lead,
Is Calgary, champion of all stampedes.

Alberta, I'm coming home to thee,
As we all take pride in the Jubilee,
To your children you are like a mother,
Alberta is my home, there will never be another.

Alberta Plans Her Golden Jubilee

This year Alberta is undertaking a comprehensive plan for her Golden Jubilee.

This plan includes the presentation of illuminated scrolls and $50 checks to Alberta citizens who were living in Alberta during 1905 and are Alberta residents during 1955, and the presentation of engraved silver spoons to all Alberta babies born on September 1, 1955. All couples married September 1, 1955 will also receive gifts.

Rustic arches are to be built on all main highways leading into the province to provide permanent entry.

Two caravans will be purchased by the Alberta Government to carry and exhibit Golden Jubilee displays. The caravans, equipped with motion picture projection machines will tour Alberta cities, towns and villages from June to September.

Special Jubilee activities will be arranged for Alberta schools by the Department of Education and will be dedicated on the school grounds June 9.

A Red Deer River Valley Memorial Park is to be established in the Badlands in the vicinity of Steveville, the area noted for its relics of the prehistoric past.

Calgary and Edmonton are each being bequeathed a magnificent $1,500,000 auditorium to commemorate the occasion.

An information display will be erected at the Fort Macleod Tourist Information Bureau.

The Alberta Government has provided a fund of $100,000 to assist municipalities in the organization of local Jubilee celebrations.

An extensive publicity program will be undertaken to advertise and promote the Jubilee which will be held throughout 1955 commencing about September 1 with festivities and dedications.

Off and Running!

The Old Musician

Here, before my piano
I place my hands upon its keys
And, in my fancy I run lightly
Up and down.

With little trills that sound like
A meadow lark singing or a brook babbling,
The wind rustling and the flowers talking
—But all this is in my mind.

I cannot command these stiff joints of mine
To play what once I knew—
I can only teach these stumbling hands
That make so many errors O God!

And yet, perhaps, some day
Those hands will search out
And grasp—
That music within my soul.

O child, I pray that thou too
Will dream as I have dreamed—
Will play as I have played
And that wilt be happy.

And that when thou art old—as I am old
And cannot command music at your finger-tips
That still within your breast might be—
Music immortal!

T.V.

There is something new in town
Big, small, tall or round
It's made of wood, glass and screen
Where people look funny and mean
It's just right for you and me
You guessed it, T.V.

My Search

I wandered over hills and mountains
In search of many magic fountains,
To grant me greater pleasure,
In the thoughts I cannot measure.

I wandered over lakes and streams
In search of many long lost dreams,
That pushed me ever on and on
Toward the glory of glowing dawn.

I have found the fountains and the dreams
And I have seen the mountains and the streams,
My wandering has ended and that is best
May God now lay my heart to rest.

Judy Youngmeyer

The teacher's voice
Drones on;
Suddenly
With a jangling outburst
The bell awakens
Sleeping students
The room comes magically
To life
As students' minds work
Along one channel—
"This is the third floor
Of the West Wing;
Next period
Is on the third floor
Of the East Wing:
Gotta hurry! Hurry! HURRY!"
But
The interrupted teacher
Takes the floor again with,
"Stop!
Have you no manners?
I must finish my sentence!"
Students sit
On the edge of their chairs,
Impatiently waiting
For permission to leave.
The teacher nods:
Desks are vacated,
Door bursts open,
The race is on.
Down the stairs,
Around the corners,
Clutching, groping,
Fighting
For the right of way;
Books fall
With a thud,
Hands swoop down
Retrieving belongings
Then the momentarily halted torrent
Of scurrying students
Moves on;
Through the tunnel,
Over the ramp,
'Round the corner—
Victory is in sight!
Then—
The clang of the bell
Fills hearts with dismay.
Panting and puffing
The classroom is reached—
A closed door!
First a timid knock,
A short discussion
With the teacher,
And off again;
Slowly,
Down the stairs,
Into the office—
That dear "Tardy Slip"
Again—no freedom tonight!
Hearts heavy,
Thoughts running along one line—
"Wouldn't it be handy
If we could fly?"

The Fountain of Youth

Crash! Bang! The door of W-6 is flung open. Clutching the wall, I prepare for the onslaught of the racing mob before me. Milling and pushing around me, they quickly drain my water supply. Why if this keeps up, I'll . . . ouch! . . . my shoulder! Just what I thought. It was that big fat boy with the glasses. When he gets a drink, he puts his whole bulk "into" it. What's that? Oh, now I know. It's only Mr. Dobson, plowing his way to the seclusion of the West Office. My gosh! Who's doing all the yelling? Oh dear, it's that poor man, Mr. Powell. Everyday his little speech of "keep moving—no loitering—no holding hands," is lost in the noisy shuffle of "size 12's" and the humdrum of the halls. Oh look! Isn't love wonderful! There goes the basketball star, gliding past, looking fondly down at his petite blonde companion. Gee, he's got some new white cords! They sure look nice with his frat sweater. Br-r-ring! At last, the bell. Spurring a sigh of relief, I watch the stragglers bang shut their lockers, scamper down the hall, and quickly close the door at the other end. There I sit, alone and peaceful—one big drip.

Medicine Man

In the jungles very dark,
Where the trees are tall, and stark;
There upon a drum-like pan,
Beats the Medicine Man.

Upon his head, are two large horns,
And on his feet, are several corns,
But no one in the jungle scorns;
The Medicine Man.

When someone wants a bead,
Or a curse upon a steed,
In the jungle he would need,
The Medicine Man.

When upon your back you lie,
And you think that you will die,
Tell the chief, and he will fly,
To find The Medicine Man.

Upon your chest he'll place a bird,
Shout incantations you've never heard,
And even though he seems absurd,
He's the Medicine Man.

And so you die out on the ground,
With Medicine Man still jumping around,
But you don't mind, for you have found,
A place free from Medicine Men.

Glen Cumming

His hands to help me were no more
His voice no longer to be heard.
Only as faint memories.

My one quarter score in years
Much too young for the heart's tears
Much too young for the heart's tears.

The morn before we laughed heartily
He and I the youngest of four
That eve the Lord came silently.

And in the morn when I awoke
To his bedside I did go.
But nowhere was he to be seen.

My mother red-eyed and in grief
Whispered to me tenderly
As I beckoned her where he was.

He has taken a long trip
No more him you shall see, But
Too young was I to realize,
Too young was I to realize.

A Westernite.

A Suggestion to Mr. Powell : Buy a Lighter !

"All right class, we'll carry on with the geometric progression work for a few more days and then start review work. Turn to page 181."

As books were being opened, one student cried, "Is that smoke?", pointing to Mr. Powell's trouser pocket. Mr. Powell glanced down and calmly remarked, "Oh! My pants are on fire," and with that, he smothered the miniature bonfire with his hand. The students burst into laughter, as Mr. Powell produced a handful of wooden matches and proceeded to sort out the burnt ones and toss them into the waste basket.

Winter Wonders

From side to side you toss, unconsciously trying to end that harsh staccato ringing of your alarm clock. Finally, after a period of annoyance you admit defeat and reach out to push down the little button. Then you roll over for that glorious five-minute doze, to which you look forward with lazy contentedness.

But, just as you begin to snuggle down, you remember that today is a special day. Of course, the ski excursion! You leap out of bed and hastily begin dressing.

Downstairs, you find mother busily making breakfast and your lunch. After forcing yourself to eat something and after quickly checking your equipment, you rush out to the garage, where dad is warming up the car.

You barely get started when mother calls—back you tramp for your lunch. Then, amid city streets and red lights, you are, at last, on the way to the bus station.

Several minutes later you arrive, just in time to hurriedly load your skis and poles onto the bus and secure your favorite seat. A wistful wave to dad and you're off.

Once on the highway, you settle down and begin to think of those many things which, ordinarily, you take for granted. Of mom and dad, willingly and unbegrudgingly, getting up early on their only day off, just so you can catch your bus. You think of how fortunate you are to have such a wonderful experience. What some people wouldn't do to have this opportunity!

You are carried back to reality by the sound of singing. Happily, you join in.

As you enter the mountains, the sun is just beginning her daily struggle over the horizon in order to cast her brilliant beauty on the snow-capped peaks.

Deeper and deeper your bus travels into the mountains. Back and forth it crawls, going from one switchback to the next, until finally you arrive at your destination. Now, a day full of nothing but skiing, skiing, skiing!

After waiting for your skis to be taken from the bus rack, you carry them over to the rail and carefully lay them down. Then you enter the lodge to lace up your boots, check your lunch at the counter, and purchase your chair-lift ticket.

Outside again, you harness your skis and, although wobbly and awkward at first, slide over to the lift.

Up you glide, smoothly and effortlessly. You watch the graceful movements of those well-schooled in your enlivening sport and the not-so-graceful tumbles of others; but all seemingly enthusiastic and carefree.

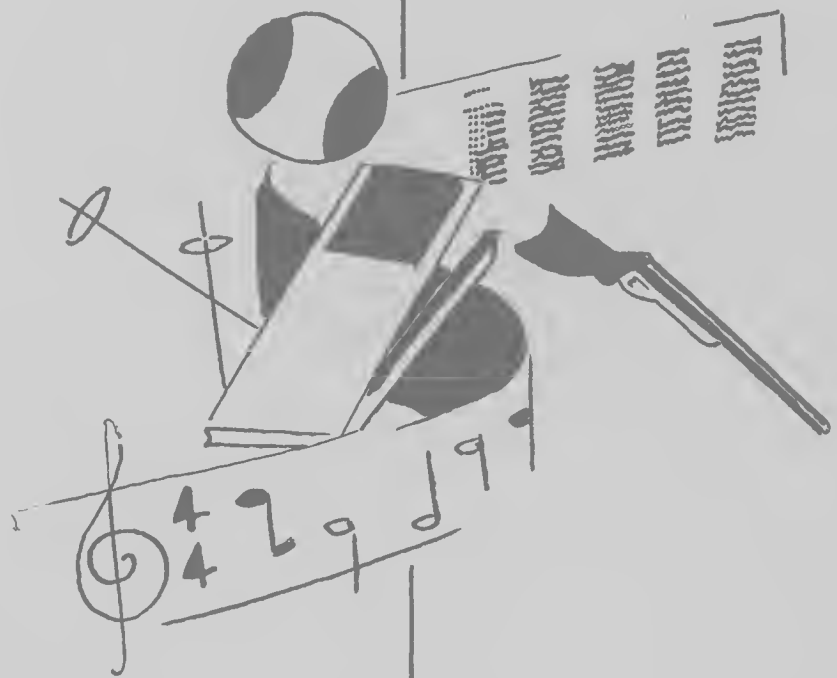

Suddenly, you realize that your eight-minute ride has ended, so you slide off your chair and move on.

To gaze at the peaceful scenery below, you ski over to the edge of the mountain. Little valleys and gaps intrigue your sense of adventure. Majestic trees climb toward the heavens but, eventually, are engulfed by the low, rolling clouds. All around, nature displays her silent beauty.

You shift your gaze to the mountain-side directly below and finally you slide away, enwrapped in the wonders of winter.

The Western Mirror, under the editorship of Juanita Frodle, highlighted sport activities, social news, features and special events during the school term.

Aided by her assistant editor—Barbara Borgal, her section editors—Margarette Sissons (Social), Sally Ann Evans (Features), Jack Kilroe (Boys' Sports), and Pat Nelson (Girls' Sports), and her co-operative staff, the editor managed to produce eight issues since September.

In December, staff members sponsored a rally based on the Christmas spirit with Dan Dunford, Santa Claus, acting as M.C.

In January, Mr. Andrew Snaddon, associate editor of the Calgary Herald, spoke to the staff. Later, the section editors accepted his invitation and toured the Herald building.

Two pages in the special "April Fool's" issue were hand set by eight printing students.

The faculty advisors were Miss Godwin who gave special assistance to the staff and Mr. Elliot who managed the setting up and printing of the Mirror.

The business managers, Harriett Viner and Dick Loest, handled successfully the financial part and Gary Greenway exhibited splendid publicity for the Western Mirror

Le Cercle Francais 1954 - 1955

Cours de "French 30"

D'abord, je voudrais féliciter les membres du Cercle de leurs progrès cette année. Ils prononcent bien ou assez bien ce qu'ils disent. Ils n'ont plus peur d'essayer de s'exprimer en français. Voilà déjà la grande bataille gagnée.

Quelques-uns des membres du Cercle de "French 30" se sont présentés en mai comme candidats devant le jury qui choisit les boursiers (ou boursières) que le Cercle envoie chaque année à Québec. Ces deux jeunes étudiants suivront le cours d'été à l'Université Laval où ils passeront six semaines ou plus dans une famille québécoise et où ils ne parleront que le français. Nous espérons bien que tous les membres du Cercle, feront dans l'avenir, un effort pour perfectionner leur français. Un jour, sans doute, ils se trouveront en Europe, et s'ils parlent le français un peu, le voyage devient beaucoup plus profitable, plus intéressant, et infiniment plus facile et agréable.

Catherine Barclay (directrice)

Cours de "French 21" et de "French 20"

Le soir où huit de nos membres ont mis en 125 boîtes et en 350 sacs des quantités énormes de bonbons! La musique entraînante de nos deux pianistes douées et fidèles, Barbara Borgal et Everal Borgal! L'assistance professionnelle de notre technicien, Norm Goodfellow, qui a fait enregistrer les voix d'une vingtaine de nos membres! Nous n'oublierons pas non plus nos chansons, notre étude d'images, nos jeux, nos concours, nos saynètes, nos exercices de prononciation, notre conversation en groupes, nos jeux de "Bingo Illustre." Toutes ces activités nous ont aidés à mieux comprendre le français et à nous exprimer plus facilement en français.

Assurément, d'ici dix ans, vous menerez une vie plus riche, et vous serez meilleurs citoyens grâce au fait que vous aurez étudié et sérieusement et gaiement le français.

ORCHESTRA

After ten years or more without an orchestra, this year Western once more brought one to life. An enthusiastic ensemble of eighteen more or less inexperienced players practised faithfully all year, and accomplished a great deal. During the year the Orchestra lost Lois Macdonald and Heidi Kass, violinists, but gained Russell Crosby, trumpeter. Practices were held at noon Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday.

The Orchestra first appeared at the Remembrance Day Assembly where they managed successfully to accompany the two national anthems, three hymns, and also played one solo selection. For the Christmas Assembly they accompanied several carols, and played three new selections. Several members also contributed solos. On this occasion, too, the members wore new red and white satin capes, fashioned by the Home Economics classes and their teachers.

Earlier in the year, the Orchestra held a banquet in the cafeteria.

During January, February, and March, the Orchestra combined with a few players from each of the other high schools to enter the Calgary Competitive Musical Festival, where they competed with Mount Royal College Orchestra for a trophy. They won. This was the first time Mount Royal College had ever been obliged to surrender the trophy.

One cold winter Friday night the orchestra played throughout two exciting basketball games. Western songs and marches were played. For this event, the Navy kindly lent drums and cymbals (which Western lack), and these were expertly handled by Glen Cummings. The next major effort was for the track meet in May. The Orchestra went en masse on Ken Coppithorne's truck, and with all their well-known tunes added no little to the general merriment.

Their last appearance was at the Graduation Exercises, where they played several accompaniments, a Grand March, and their festival selections. All in all this was a memorable and entirely successful year, the prelude, it is hoped, to many more like it.

The Glee Club for the year 1954-55 has been a small one, comprising all students in the music classes, and about twelve others. Nevertheless, the club has flourished, and taken part in several important gatherings. Each Monday the boys and girls have practised in E 14 during noon recess. At Christmas time, together with the orchestra, the Glee Club furnished an enjoyable program at the Christmas Assembly. The Club sang, too, at an evening Home and School meeting, at the Remembrance Day Assembly, and also at the June Graduation Exercises. They are at present planning to produce the Gilbert and Sullivan Opera, "Patience," next year.

DRAMATICS

“STAGE DOOR”

Another successful play, directed by Miss Betty Mitchell and featuring the members of her drama class, was presented in the auditorium on March 30, 31, and April 1.

This three act play revolved around the lives of twenty girls in a sleazy New York brownstone house. All these ambitious young women were attempting to make the big time in Broadway, for various reasons.

Jean Maitland wanted the glamour, money and adoration in theatre so she went to Hollywood. Blonde Pat Lemon was well cast not only for her looks but because her interpretation was good.

A girl who finds that it is best to be tough and off-hand in the glitter of Broadway, Judith Canfield, was a very delightful and clever bit of colour on the stage. Marilyn Suliak showed a great deal of spark and contrast especially in her scene with the sensitive 'Kaye Hamilton,' played by Barbara Martinusen. She gave a great deal to her performance. In order to play this desperate and distraught girl she was often lost in the flash of laughter and colour. However, in the scene preceeding her death she gave a very gripping performance.

To add variety and to give one a real cross section of New York life Mattie, the maid, at this club created an immediate response of laughter from her audience. Mrs. Orcutt, owner of the house was very much the actress from the old school.

The men of this play were sometimes lost in the gaiety and feminine fuss, but were nonetheless essential. Jack Herman made us laugh at and yet dislike Keith Burgess very much. His movements and his speech were very good. His was a very enjoyable characterization. Clark Pendergast as Dr. Randall was very affectionate and paternal. The personage of David Kingsley required more polish and maturity to measure up to the man of the world class.

Terry Randall, the central role, was received with praise and admiration by the many who laughed, cried, and bubbled along with her. The audience was particularly thrilled by the last scene in which Terry, her heart full of joy and a head full of dreams, stands alone and stately in the filtering moonlight.

The set this year was a very pleasing one very appropriate and really a credit to Bruce Shore and those who helped back stage. The props and costumes were well chosen, and at no time was the stage in discord. Without the effective and well-timed lights, several of these scenes would have fallen short of the usual Mitchell standard.

ATHLETICS

Boys' Sports

What does success really mean? Does it mean to beat all opposition—to be on top, to win at any price? Perhaps this is the way success is so commonly translated in the world today. But, in amateur sports a different interpretation is demanded. The true athlete must have a code of ethics, which requires him to play cleanly and fairly at all times. This code also prevents him from quitting until the final whistle, thus making him strive to play his best, no matter what the odds. If he lives up to these standards, then he is successful. Such were Western's athletes this past year.

Girls' Sports

Interest, sportsmanship and athletic ability proved to be the outstanding qualities among the girls who took part in sports this year at Western.

The end of the basketball season left Western with two hard fought-for trophies, namely, the Junior and Intermediate Cups. High scorers for the teams were: senior - Anne Monroe and Peg Scott—34 points, Shirley Cowie—20 and Irene Pearson 12; intermediate - Gerry Greenman—65, Jeanne Stronach—47 and June Thomas—25; junior - Brenda Harrison—27, Gloria Lamont—18 and Barb Hager—16.

Many thanks go to the coaches, Miss Schwartz, Tom MacNamara, and Bill Dumerton for their hard work in drilling the girls.

Volleyball claimed the interest of the majority of students. The teams divided very evenly. Four leagues, Senior 'A,' Junior 'A,' Senior 'B,' and Junior 'B' were set up, the winners being Phil Kouk, John Stein, Gordie Calkins and Bob Oschipok, with Phil Kouk winning the Senior division.

Every morning and evening after Easter the girls eagerly practised (consequently getting some pretty sore muscles) in preparation for the annual track meet, which was held on May 27, at Mewata Stadium. Several new events were added this year as well as some being eliminated. The ball throw was replaced by the discus-throw, the one hundred yard dash replaced the six-girl relay. The standing broad jump was discontinued but the 80-metre hurdles introduced.

All in all, Western's girls enjoyed a good season and look forward to an even better one next year.

Outdoor Men Know The Value Of HBC 'Point Blanket' Coats!

Because they know that famous Hudson's Bay Point Blanket Coats are tailored in a blend of the finest wool from the Empire, Combed, preshrunk and the thick fur-like nap that resists snow and rain to such a degree, is brushed up by hand. Just like the outdoor men of today, when the voyageurs paddled up the swift Canadian rivers and across the Great Lakes to open up this continent, they wore mackinaws of Hudson's Bay Blankets. Those who went singing out of Montreal had mackinaws of standard blue; those from Quebec, red, of course; and Trois Rivières—mais oui!—all white . . . Today you have a wider selection of colors. Scarlet with black band, camel with dark band or multi-stripes. Each . . .

PORTABLE TYPEWRITER

with Full-Size Office Typewriter Colorspeed Keyboard

● For schoolwork, writing letters, typing reports, and learning to type, there's nothing like a Smith-Corona portable. No wonder it's the all-family favorite! Students say they raise their marks at least 10% when they type their schoolwork. Stop in for a demonstration of the Smith-Corona portable typewriter.
